WebWorks.com Announces Plans for Wiki Publishing

Leading Publishing Platform Software Developer Reveals Upcoming “Publish To Wiki” Functionality

AUSTIN, Texas — May 29, 2008 — At the recent DocTrain West conference held in Vancouver, BC, WebWorks.com, a brand of Quadralay Corporation, the leading developer of publishing platform solutions for single-source delivery of online content, announced that the FALL 2008 release of its flagship ePublisher Platform product will include a “publish to wiki” function.

This will enable companies to quickly pre-populate corporate wikis with existing content with just a few simple clicks, reducing the cost of deployment and ensuring consistent, quality content.

“Our customers will now be able to take full advantage of this exciting new Web 2.0 technology,” said Ben Allums, Director of Engineering at WebWorks.com, “More and more companies are investigating ways to deliver their content to wikis for both internal and external use. By leveraging the modular design and publishing power of the ePublisher Platform we will be in a position to help them achieve that.”

WebWorks.com will be demonstrating the “publish to wiki” functionality at the STC National Summit in Philadelphia from June 1 to 4, 2008.
